Look at a picture of the ladies of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority on the front stoop of their house at the University of Wyoming.

At first glance, it's a seemingly ordinary snap of women in their college years. Sadly, it's completely extraordinary.

Look again. One sorority member looms over all the rest.

Langford is not like the other girls, because Langford is a biological male, who identifies as a woman.

What this image truly shows is a country whose moral compass is spinning wildly out of control.

Now former KKG members are speaking out and what they have to say is shocking.

According to a legal complaint, Langford has been seen in the shared sorority house space watching the women with 'an erection visible through his leggings.'

At 'other times, he has had a pillow in his lap,' the document states.

Yes, you read that right.

Langford is reportedly attracted to women and apparently, Langford's not shy about it.

The national Kappa Kappa Gamma organization is now being sued by seven former members, who claim that KKG broke its agreement with them by admitting a biological male – accused of sexually explicit public behavior – into an all-female institution.

Look again. One sorority member looms over all the rest. That's Artemis Langford (above, far left in orange), who reportedly stands at 6'2" tall and weighs 260 pounds.
